

Supporting Mobility, Dignity, and Inclusion

cbm's Work with People Living with Disabilities

For over 100 years, cbm (Christian Blind Mission) has worked alongside people with disabilities in some of the world's poorest communities — supporting access to healthcare, rehabilitation, mobility, and inclusion.

While our focus is global, our mission is local at heart: to see every person living with dignity, regardless of where they are or what they face.

In many low-income countries, people who experience limb loss have very limited access to mobility devices, rehab services, or safe surgery. A simple prosthesis can mean the difference between isolation and participation — especially for women, children, or people in rural communities.

cbm works with local partners to provide:

- Mobility aids like wheelchairs and prosthetics
- Access to rehabilitation and community support
- Inclusive education and employment opportunities
- Advocacy for accessibility and rights

Every programme is built with and for people with lived experience — because sustainable change must be shaped by those at the centre of it.
